Fish feats captured through coded wire tag project

Coordinated management efforts by Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service produce angler benefits.

MILWAUKEE - In a remarkable feat of distance swimming, tiny chinook salmon released in Lake Huron two years ago swam their way through the Straits of Macinac and down through Lake Michigan into the waters off of Racine, according to newly released data gathered with the help of Wisconsin anglers.

Brad Eggold, Lake Michigan fisheries supervisor for the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources, said the 400 mile journey of fish released by the state of Michigan points to the benefits of coordinated management efforts given the mobility of species like salmon. Other fish caught at the Racine checkpoint originated from stocking efforts in Door County, western Michigan, Indiana and Illinois.

The study documenting the movement of fish throughout the lakes also indicates that natural reproduction of chinooks is picking up steam in Lake Michigan. For chinooks that are one year old, 55 percent of the population now comes from natural reproduction.

What makes these findings possible? Fish heads - containing tiny coded wire tags –that have been saved by attentive anglers and dropped off at key ports and collection points along Lake Michigan’s shores.

The tags, which are embedded into the snouts of young fish, include numbers identifying when and where the fish were stocked. The tags themselves are smaller than a fine sliver of pencil lead, yet when entered into a database maintained by U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service scientists, they provide a powerful narrative about the lives of these fish.

“We could not undertake this type of research without the support of an educated and dedicated group of anglers willing to save the fish heads and bring them in to our collection points,” says Eggold. “The results continue to provide incredible insights into the movement and reproduction of Chinook salmon while demonstrating the benefits of interstate cooperation. For example , an-

Fly Tying with "Jack" Starts Tuesday, October 21st

The art, skills, challenges, and pleasures of fly fishing are enhanced by tying your own fishing flies. The satisfaction of using your own personally tied fly pattern and catching fish with them is special. Why? Because you did it right.

This year we have set aside 23 weeks of fly tying, starting on October 21, 2014 to March 2015. Our selection of flies include the very best of fish catchers around. Each fly chosen requires its' own unique material and technique to tie it correctly. Fly tying instruction is for the beginners and intermediate skill level, with time-proven experienced instruction available at all times. Come join us, learn something new, have a fun time, and yes, tell us about your fishing stories, (whether they be truthful, or not).

Fishing Report

Fishing out of Northpoint has been good with catches made up of mostly Steelhead and Lake Trout. Moonshine RV and Stinger Spoons are the top producers. Shore anglers are doing well catching kings and browns in the Waukegan, Kenosha and Racine Harbors. Glow in the dark Flicker Shad, Moonshine Casting Spoons and Flicker Minnows are catching many salmon. Brown trout are biting well on tube jigs under bobbers.

Fly Tying with "Jack" Starts Tuesday, October 21st

Our location is the Moose Club, lower level, (use the Northwest entrance door, leading downstairs). The first class starts on October 21, 2014, Tuesday night at 7:00 PM. Questions? Call Jack Springer at 694-9462.

glers harvesting fish in Racine are catching fish stocked everywhere in Lake Michigan and in some cases, fish stocked in Lake Huron.”

While the natural reproduction data varies somewhat by year—in part due to inconsistencies in the numbers of fish heads collected—a six year time series dating from 2006 to 2011 indicates natural reproductions levels well above 50 percent. The results represent good news for anglers, whose license purchases have provided the funding to support biological research, as fisheries managers will continue to fine-tune stocking strategies based on the latest scientific data.

Eggold says state agencies with jurisdiction surrounding Lake Michigan as well as the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service would like to encourage anglers to continue providing fish heads so the research can progress through additional years. While the tiny coded wire tags placed in the snout of the fish may be difficult to see, anglers can tell whether their salmon or trout carries a tag because the adipose fin on the fish’s back, just in front of the tail, will be missing.

DNR appreciates the efforts of the more than 200 anglers who participated last year and the businesses that serve as collection points. These businesses have been given a supply of forms for anglers to fill out and bags to use for freezing the heads.

The forms ask anglers to include basic information such as the date of capture, capture location, fish species, length, weight and gender.

The Kenosha Sport fishing and Conservation Association is a non-profit organization dedicated to the protection and proper utilization of the Great Lakes resources. Established in 1969 by local family fisherman, we continue to focus on conservation of the Great Lakes. For over 40 years the K.S.F.C.A. has worked to support our community and the Great Lakes through various activities and educational programs. Some current examples include: kids fishing programs, fly tying classes, Pike river clean-up efforts, and stocking Lake Michigan with over 40,000 Chinook salmon annually.

If you would like to support these activities, please contact us by phone, mail, or email. We welcome anyone interested in becoming a member. If you are not interested in becoming a member, but would still like to support these important activities in our community, we do accept financial donations.
